More Resilient Communities

"Three threads that work together to support local economic transition."

More Resilient Communities

Part of developing Networks of Support and Information includes an understanding of the types of relationships and networks currently in place. The mobilization of networks can impact the capacity and roles that leaders, municipal staff, business members, service providers, and voluntary groups may play in community transition. Networks help to enhance the resilience of a community, link residents to a wider range of expertise, resources, and supports, and can lead to partnerships for new service or business arrangements.

The Network Tool for Mackenzie identifies the local and regional networks currently in place for this community. It helps local leaders to determine potential contacts that may need to be developed to assist with planning or transition.

The Network Tool for Mackenzie is one piece of Networks of Support and Information. In turn, Networks of Support and Information is one of three important threads that work together to support local economic transition.

This spring, our research team visited communities around the Omineca Beetle Action Coalition (OBAC) region to conduct an inventory of key contacts for local and non-local groups as part of the OBAC Community Transition Preparedness Project. Communities visited included: Mackenzie, McBride, Valemount, Fort St. James, Smithers, Telkwa, Houston, Granisle, Burns Lake, Fraser Lake, and Vanderhoof. We wish to thank all of the community groups, business members, service providers, policy makers, and municipal staff who took the time to help out and to answer our many questions.

Special thanks to members of OBAC who helped to provide input and feedback on the project. This includes Elizabeth Andersen and Herb Langin. We also wish to thank Sarah Fraser with the provincial government's Community Transition Branch.

On our research team, we wish to thank Petter Jacobsen for assistance in conducting survey work and entering data. We also wish to thank Chelan Hoffman for creating the data collection instruments, and Shawn Rennebohm for his assistance in editing the reports.

Funding for this project came from OBAC and the BC Ministry of Community Development, Community Transition Branch.

About this Report

With provincial funding, the Omineca Beetle Action Coalition (OBAC) was established in 2005 to respond to challenges and opportunities associated with the Mountain Pine Beetle (MPB) epidemic. The goal was to establish a series of strategies and provide direction to diversify economies, enhance resiliency, and ensure the long-term viability of communities within the OBAC region.

The “Community Transition Preparedness Project” is being undertaken through a partnership involving OBAC, the Community Development Institute (CDI) at UNBC, and the Community Transition Branch of the BC Ministry of Community Services. The ‘location’ of the project includes the areas and communities covered by OBAC within the Fraser-Fort George Regional District and the Bulkley-Nechako Regional Districts. In terms of population, the 2006 census recorded a population of 101,881 for the Fraser-Fort George Regional District, and 44,147 for the Bulkley-Nechako Regional District. This area is the most significantly impacted by the MPB epidemic.

There are three pieces to the OBAC “Community Transition Preparedness Project”. First, an inventory of services and networks in communities was completed to assess their ‘readiness’ to engage with transition processes. The second involves reviewing this gap analysis with OBAC communities. The final piece entails refining the “economic transition toolkit” that the CDI designed to help rural and small town places prepare for challenges and change.

The purpose of this report is to identify key contacts for local and regional networks for Mackenzie. This will help to determine linkages that currently exist between local and other local and non-local individuals and organizations. This information can be used as a foundation to determine what, if any, potential network contacts a municipality may need for development planning or economic transition. To facilitate different forms of communication with these groups and organizations, any available or applicable contact information is listed, including key contact personnel, phone numbers, fax numbers, physical street address, mailing address, e-mail, and website. Similar reports have been generated for McBride, Valemount, Smithers, Telkwa, Houston, Granisle, Burns Lake, Fraser Lake, Fort St. James, and Vanderhoof.
