CONGRATULATIONS GRADS!

The number of university students – and graduates – in the North is on the rise as UNBC continues to expand its regional campuses and offer more courses in more northern communities.

A Local Scholar

Jennifer Studer of Quesnel has the opportunity to earn a UNBC degree for free, after receiving a UNBC Scholars award. The award is presented annually to the top students from every northern BC high school. As long as they maintain a B average at UNBC, UNBC Scholars can have their tuition covered for all four years of their bachelor's degree program. Jennifer started at UNBC this past September and is pursuing a degree in Biology.

The new CNC / UNBC Campus in Quesnel

New Campus Under Construction

The new CNC and UNBC campus in Quesnel has been quickly taking shape on the south side of the Quesnel River near the Rec Centre. The building, with its spectacular wood architecture, will house a variety of degree programs in the Cariboo, including a new Master of Education group (just starting this fall) and the 22 students who join the Nursing program each year. The $12 million campus is being built by Lauren Construction of Williams Lake.

A Message from the President

Join me in celebrating the successes of all of the UNBC students from your home region, including those who have graduated or won student awards.

In my last year as President of UNBC, I'm struck by how UNBC has grown since I first arrived in northern BC in 1995. Today, UNBC has more than 3600 students at campuses throughout northern BC and research activity that is touching every community and region around the North. Others are starting to take note: this past year, UNBC matched its best-ever ranking in the Maclean's magazine ranking of Canadian universities, placing seventh in our category and best among small universities in western Canada. The National Post has rated UNBC as one of the most research-intensive universities in Canada, our alumni are more satisfied with their university experience than the graduates of any other BC university, and first-year UNBC students are generally more satisfied than students at other universities across Canada.

UNBC is integral to the development of northern BC and northern communities are vital to the development of UNBC. Together, we'll continue to provide opportunities for our citizens right here in the North.

Dr. Charles Jago
President, UNBC

What's Happening at UNBC

- The Government of BC has provided more than $20 million toward the construction of the Northern Sport Centre at UNBC's Prince George campus. This new athletic facility will include a gymnasium, an indoor field, indoor track, and services for high-performance training and sport development. It's expected that the NSC will serve as a BC centre for Nordic ski training while also providing a home court for the varsity basketball teams.
- UNBC has recently added new programs including Aboriginal Health Sciences, Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, Environmental Engineering, a Bachelor of Education degree, a Master of Business Administration degree, and a Family Nurse Practitioner master's degree.
- About two-thirds of UNBC graduates are living and working in northern BC. This year, for example, Northern Health recruited 84% of UNBC nursing grads, while nearly 100% of the Social Work and Education grads from the region plan to continue living and working in their home towns.

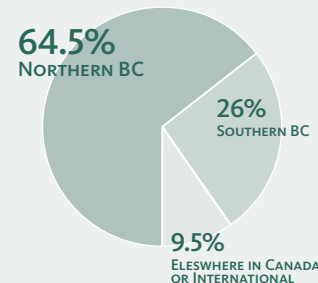

UNBC Facts

- UNBC awarded more than $1.5 million in scholarships and bursaries to students in 2004.
- There are 3664 students at UNBC, including 410 First Nations students and students from 33 countries.

- Annual research funding has surpassed $10 million for the first time.

- This year, 735 students graduated from UNBC. The total number of UNBC alumni is now more than 5,000.
