SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK
University of Northern British Columbia

Mission Statement

Social work education at the University of Northern British Columbia is committed to a program of studies that is informed by a central concern for human rights, personal empowerment, community change, and social justice. It has as its foundation an analysis of power in relation to class, race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, and abilities. Incorporating critical social thinking including structural, feminist, and anti-racist analyses, the School focuses on social work in northern and remote areas, aboriginal and cross cultural issues, women and human services, and community practice and research. It will continue to develop in collaboration with regional, national, and global communities.

The School of Social Work seeks to provide its graduates with intellectual, practical, and professional skills and knowledge rooted in progressive values that promote beneficial change. By acknowledging the holistic, interdisciplinary, and activist nature of social work and its commitment to social justice, the curriculum and governance of social work education at UNBC will strive to provide a self-reflective balance between theory and practice; research, teaching, and community service; and critical self-awareness and respect for the ideas of others. The School of Social Work will seek to ensure a safe and stimulating education environment for faculty, staff, and students.

The Bachelor of Social Work (BSW)

The Bachelor of Social Work degree at UNBC is designed to prepare students for beginning level, generalist social work practice with individuals, families, groups, and communities. The focus of the BSW is oriented towards social work in northern and remote areas, First Nations, women and the human services, and community practice and research. Analysis of class, gender, and race relations are considered central to the school of social work. As mandated by its accrediting body, the Canadian Association for Social Work Education and the Social Work Code of Ethics, Social Work at UNBC provides a professional program that advocates for justice and equality and equips graduates with the intellectual, practical, and professional skills needed to promote beneficial change.

Social Work exists in an era of globalization that results in growing unemployment, under-employment, deepening economic vulnerability and uncertainty for many Canadians. This has resulted in increased demand for assistance and social work intervention during a period of declining resources, fiscal restraint, and growing uncertainty for client groups as well as human service workers. Another reality is that First Nations and other consumer groups have begun to take control of their own services. They have rejected and altered many of the practices social work once took for granted. In this process the relations of power between professionals and client groups have changed.

One of the major challenges facing social work education at UNBC is to provide a program of studies that prepares students for effective practice in the evolving economic, political, and social contexts. Social Work at UNBC does this by accenting the way global, national, provincial, and historical forces affect the well-being of those that live, work, and practice in this region. A major strength of the program lies in its effort to foster critical intervention skills that weave the domains of social policy and research with social work practice. This priority is attained through course offerings that emphasize and integrate the crucial links between social work and social welfare policy, practice, and research.

ACCREDITATION: The BSW program at UNBC is accredited by the Canadian Association for Social Work Education (CASWE).

MODE OF STUDY: The school of social work offers a full-time and part-time program of studies using both classroom-based and web-based courses. One of the biggest advantages of online learning is that it allows for interaction in both synchronous and asynchronous modes. That is, it allows for place and time independence. Students can interact on their own time and have the flexibility to take courses without physically walking into the classroom. Given the increasing use of online learning technology, it is important to become familiar with learn.unbc.ca as an online learning environment. The Northern Social Work Student Association with support from the Centre for Teaching, Learning, and Technology host a site where students can participate in a variety of online activities. It is recommended that you contact Grant Potter, E-Learning Coordinator at (960-5188) or gpotter@unbc.ca to acquire information on how to “login” to learn.unbc.ca.

Location of Study: Courses are offered in Prince George and selected regional sites.

- Prince George
- Dawson Creek/Fort St. John
- Quesnel
- Terrace
- Vancouver

Admission Process

Admission to the BSW program is by selection and takes place in the third year of university studies. There are three routes into the program. These include:

Entry Route # 1 - Admission following Two Years of General University Study:

Students will have completed 60 credit hours of study, and have achieved a minimum grade point average of 2.67 (B-) calculated on a student's most recent 60 credit hours of studies. It will also be expected that students have completed the following pre-requisites (as part of the required 60 credit hours of study):

- SOCW 200-3 Introduction to Social Work Practice
- SOCW 201-3 Introduction to Social Welfare
- FNST 100-3 The Aboriginal Peoples of Canada
- WMST 100-3 Introduction to Women's Studies

Entry Route # 2 - Transfer from the Community Colleges:

Students enrolled in BC community colleges are eligible for discretionary transfer credit. Students will need to consult with their college advisor and the BCCAT document.

Students will have completed a minimum 54 credit hours of study, and have achieved a minimum grade point average of 2.67 (B-) calculated on a student's most recent 54 credit hours of studies. Students admitted with 54 credit hours must complete 6 credit hours of liberal arts courses before they can graduate. It is expected that students will have completed the following pre-requisites (as part of the required 54 credit hours of study) (Check with your institution to see which courses are considered equivalent. Not all seemingly related courses transfer.):

- SOCW 200-3 Introduction to Social Work Practice
- SOCW 201-3 Introduction to Social Welfare
- FNST 100-3 The Aboriginal Peoples of Canada
- WMST 100-3 Introduction to Women's Studies

Entry Route # 3 - Entry from a Bachelor Degree in a related discipline

Students who hold a Bachelor degree in a related discipline and have achieved a minimum grade point average of 2.67 (B-) can apply for entrance into the third year of the School of Social Work. Students applying to the School of Social Work with a Baccalaureate degree in a related discipline do not have to take the four BSW course pre-requisites:

Selection Process: Admission into the school of social work is a competitive process. Preference will be given to applicants with:

- Equal access according to age, race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, disability, and paid or volunteer human service experience
- Northern and remote residency
- Grade Point Average
- Statement of intent
- References

Students must also undergo a criminal record search as part of the admission process. A personal interview may be requested to address issues arising from the criminal record search, reference letters, and statement of intent. Students are also expected to comply with the standards articulated in the BCASW Code of Ethics throughout their program of training in Social Work at UNBC.

When can I Apply?

Prince George Campus: There is one Admissions intake per year for the BSW Program offered at the Prince George Campus. Application packages are available the first week of November, due January 31st, for a September start date. Applications can be accessed online at http://www.unbc.ca/socialwork/application_forms.html, or at the Office of the Registrar.

Regional Campuses (Quesnel, Fort St. John/Dawson Creek, Terrace, Vancouver: Admissions for the regional campuses occur every second year. Application packages are available the first week of November, due January 31st, for a September start date. Applications can be accessed online at http://www.unbc.ca/socialwork/application_forms.html, the regional campus, or at the Office of the Registrar in Prince George.

Program Options

In addition to our generalist BSW program, the following specialization streams are available:

Child Welfare Specialization: The Child Welfare Specialization (CWS) was introduced in 2001 as a program of studies designed to prepare students for practice in the field of child welfare. It is intended to increase the student's educational and career opportunities for social work practice in all child and family serving agencies. Students who opt for the CWS may be required to undergo a suitability interview with a designated child welfare agency. It should also be understood that there are only a limited number of fourth year field placement options in the communities of Prince George, Quesnel, Terrace, Dawson Creek/Fort St. John and Vancouver. CWS field placement options may be available in outlying communities. For additional information you are asked to contact the Field Director. Completion of the specialization is noted on the student's graduating transcript.

First Nations Specialization: The First Nations Specialization (FNS) has been designed to provide a program of studies that prepares students for practice with First Nations people, communities, and organizations. Students enrolled in the FNS are required to complete their fourth year practicum with a First Nations organization. Completion of the specialization is noted on the student's graduating transcript.

Required Social Work Courses

3rd Year - 300 Level

SOCW 300-3: SW Communication Skills

Communication Skills in Social Work Practice is an introductory course that aims to increase skills and analysis in the diverse cultural settings that are appropriate to social work among First Nations and remote, northern and rural communities. Learning to recognize the contradictions in people=s experiences and to maximize the possibilities, resources and strengths in their lives are critical aspects of a social worker=s practice. Emphasis on integration of interpersonal and analytic skills in learning effective helping strategies within a structural framework that acknowledges the influence of class, race and gender in shaping personal and social well-being. This course includes a Skills Laboratory.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 301-3: Critical Social Work Practice

This course critically examines the historical origins, values, methods and applications of various social work practice approaches. With an emphasis on structural, feminist, and First Nation social work strategies, the focus includes the application of these approaches to women, minority groups, First Nations, and residents of northern and remote communities. These will be contrasted with other models of social work practice including general systems theory, ecological theory, and case management.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 302-6: Social Work Field Education I

An initial three-day per week field placement, which includes a bi-weekly integrative seminar, is required of all students. Students are involved in a wide range of practice roles and responsibilities at the individual, family, group and community levels. The course provides an initial opportunity for students to link social work concepts and theory with practice skills. It also introduces students to the structure, goals and operation of different human service agencies. Field practice objectives and details will be worked out among the student, the agency field supervisor and the faculty practicum advisor.

Prerequisites: SOCW 300-3, 301-3, 310-3 and 320-3; enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 310-3: First Nations SW Issues

First Nations Social Work Practice Issues examines methods of developing an anti-racist social work practice in the context of First Nations experience. Particular emphasis is placed on understanding emerging models and structures within First Nations communities. The development of these models is explored within a context of analysing the impact of the colonial experience. Students are introduced to alternative methods including some of the healing strategies and organizational structures in First Nations communities.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

Preclusioned: SOCW 410-3

SOCW 320-3: Critical Social Policy

This course examines the development of social policy in Canada, including current debates, from conventional and critical perspectives inviting students to consider the relationship between research, policy and social work practice. The course will review ideologies of social welfare policy, its formulation and implementation and consequences for people in need. Policy formulation will be analysed from a critical perspective that examines the role of power and privilege in the construction of social policy. Alternative social arrangements and models of policy and practice will be explored.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 330-3: SW Research/Policy/Practice

Social Work Research, Policy and Practice introduces research methods and analysis techniques that are used to examine issues in the policy and practice of social work and social welfare. It reviews qualitative and quantitative approaches with an emphasis on community needs research, participatory research and the development of interview schedules and questionnaires. The methods examined in this course will be linked to substantive policy and practice issues that reflect the economic, social and personal circumstances of people and communities in northern, remote and First Nation communities.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 336-3: SW Philosophy and Ethics

Social Work Philosophy and Ethics critically assesses the ethical issues involved in carrying out the tasks of social work practice, policy and research. Using the Social Work Code of Ethics as a starting point, these practice, policy and research roles are considered in the context of northern and remote social work. The course reviews different theoretical approaches to social work.

Prerequisites: enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

4th Year - 400 Level

SOCW 401-3: Northern/Remote SW Practice

Northern and Remote Social Work Practice builds on the structural approach examined in SOCW 301-3. Critical generalist practice will be examined within the context of current and emerging client populations and practice issues. The course aims to develop a critical awareness/analysis of the nature, cause and response of social workers to the social problems they are meant to deal with in the field practice aspects of their work in northern and remote communities.

Prerequisites: all 100, 200, and 300 level required courses in Social Work

SOCW 402-15: Social Work Field Education II

This field placement requires students to perform in a social work role or organizational setting five days per week through the entire term. Field education provides undergraduate students with an opportunity to enhance and refine their social work skills. As much as possible, the assigned field education setting will broadly match the particular type of social work experience that the student wishes to pursue. The course includes three one-day seminars as part of the field education placement.

Prerequisites: all 100-, 200-, 300-, and 400- level requirements; enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 420-3: Family/Child Welfare Policy

Family and Child Welfare Policy focuses particularly on feminist and First Nations critiques of child welfare policy and social work intervention. It critically examines assumptions in family and child welfare policy including notions of family, substitute care, conceptions about violence and neglect, and the implications of child and welfare policy for social work practice in northern communities.

Prerequisites: SOCW 320-3; enrolment limited to students admitted to the School of Social Work

SOCW 421-3: Human Growth and Development (cross-listed as Psychology 345)

Examines human growth and development with an emphasis on social processes from birth to death. The course follows a life cycle approach and addresses the influence of issues such as culture, class, gender and sexual orientation. Linkages are drawn between individual human development and health and social welfare policy, particularly as it affects residents of northern British Columbia. Note: students who have not taken a human growth and development course must take this course prior to graduating with a BSW.

Prerequisites: Enrolment limited to students admitted to the Health Sciences, Nursing, Psychology and Social Work, or with permission of the Social Work Chair. If students have previously taken a human growth and development course, they must check with a Student Advisor to ensure that the course meets the Human Growth and Development requirement.

Precluded: PSYC 345-3

SOCW 422-3: Child Welfare Practice

Child maltreatment is examined from the perspective of social work practice in the field of child welfare. The course looks at the various forms of child maltreatment including the methods of assessing maltreatment and the cultural and structural factors that must be considered in assessing issues such as risk. Intervention strategies are also examined along with legal procedures and responsibilities carried by child welfare social workers.

Prerequisites: SOCW 301-3

Only students admitted to the School of Social Work can take this course.

Note: Required Course for Child Welfare Specialization

SOCW 426-3: Current Issues in Child Welfare Practice

Current Issues in Child Welfare Practice highlights topical child welfare issues and current trends in child welfare practice, examines different methods of intervention and attempts to link changes in the economic circumstances of families to the social well being and healthy family functioning.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

Note: Required Course for Child Welfare Specialization

SOCW 439-3: Social Work/Law and the Justice System

Social Work, Law and the Justice System will examine various areas of the Canadian legal system: constitutional documents and conventions, the court system, the provincial legislative powers, rights of Aboriginal Peoples, the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and provincial legislation (such as Adoption Act; Child, Family and Community Service Act; Child, Youth and Family Advocacy Act, Family Relations Act, etc.). It also examines the practice of social work in court settings. Specifically, it provides a basic understanding of the rights and interests of children, rules of evidence, and the role of various interveners. Court writing skills will be introduced and court visits will be arranged.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

Note: Required Course for Child Welfare Specialization

SOCW 455-3: First Nations Governance and Social Policy

Family Values and standards of First Nations form the basis of the study on First Nations policy development and its relationship to self-governance for First Nations' Communities. Topics explored include: self-determination from a First Nations perspective, its impact on Canadian Social Policy, along with the necessity to address Child and Family social needs into self-governance and planning. The course focuses on examples within British Columbia communities. Additionally, the course explores the importance of how social work practitioners need to become skilled advocates aimed at influencing policy and laws affecting First Nations and family systems.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

Note: Required Course for First Nations Specialization

SOCW 456-3: Family Caring Systems

This course develops an understanding of family caring systems from an Aboriginal/First Nations perspective. Topics explored include Aboriginal/First Nations world views, traditional roles of family members, the role that historical events have played in the development and current social realities of First Nations and the role that social workers can play in family wellness. Contemporary social work practices with Aboriginal/First Nations children and families are also analyzed and critically reflected upon, with a particular emphasis on future directions in Aboriginal/First Nations child and family welfare.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

Note: Required Course for First Nations Specialization

SOCW 457-3: Individual and Community Wellness

This course develops an understanding of the role that wellness plays in the life of Aboriginal/First Nations individuals and communities. Topics explored include the definition of healing and wellness, the role that historical events have played in the development and current socio-economic situation of First Nations and the role that social workers can play in the future development of health and wellness of First Nations individuals and communities. As well, the issue of self-care and self-management for First Nations people and the social workers who may work in high stress situations is explored.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

Note: Required Course for First Nations Specialization

Elective Social Work Courses

SOCW 422-3: Child Welfare Practice

Child maltreatment is examined from the perspective of social work practice in the field of child welfare. The course looks at the various forms of child maltreatment including the methods of assessing maltreatment and the cultural and structural factors that must be considered in assessing issues such as risk. Intervention strategies are also examined along with the legal procedures and responsibilities carried by child welfare social workers.

Prerequisite: SOCW 301-3

Only students admitted to the School of Social Work can take this course.

SOCW 424-3: Child Welfare/Sites of Resistance

Sites of Resistance: Race, Poverty and Sexuality in the Fields of Child Welfare focuses on contemporary child welfare policy and practice from the standpoints of racial and sexual minorities as well as from those on the economic margins of contemporary capitalist/patriarchal society.

Prerequisite: SOCW 420-3

SOCW 426-3: Current Issues in Child Welfare Practice

Current Issues in Child Welfare Practice highlights topical child welfare issues and current trends in child welfare practice, examines different methods of intervention and attempts to link changes in the economic circumstances of families to the social well being and healthy family functioning.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 432-3: Unemployment and Social Work

Unemployment, Social Welfare and Social Work Practice examines the implications of unemployment and underemployment for social work practice and policy within a provincial, national and global context. In particular, the course will focus on the reframing of unemployment as a social work issue, explore the social consequences of joblessness, and identify models of policy and practice which are applicable in different environments: northern, rural, urban and single industry communities. Alternative policies will be explored.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 433-3: Women in the Human Services

From a feminist and structural social work perspective, this course examines a range of women's issues in terms of socialization, work, health, sexuality, power and the state, legal issues, and the impact these have on the roles and positions of women in Canadian society, and in particular within human and social services.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 435-3: Community Social Policy

Community Social Policy and Social Work Practice represents a community practice project geared to integrating Social Work theory, policy, research and practice with specific community issues. Students will prepare public briefs on actual areas of community concern in the light of social work and welfare theory, policy and practice. The brief focuses on proposed forms of action and the implementation of the strategies of change and intervention.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 437-3: SW with Groups and Communities

Social Work with Groups and Communities examines the historical evolution of group work and the role that Social Work has played within this context. Different types of group approaches and experiences are discussed, including professionally led groups and self-help groups. Students consider the operation of groups through analysis of group norms, roles, values, goals and decision making from a perspective that is both theoretical and experiential.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 438-3: Comparative Welfare Analysis

Comparative Social Welfare Analysis (also listed as SOCW 621) provides a critical introduction to Canadian and comparative social policy as it relates to evolving issues in Social Work practice. Its main theme is to show how the welfare systems of individual countries can only be understood through exploring the wider international context. Particular attention is paid to the interactions between family policies and issues of race and gender, and to the processes by which individuals or groups are given or denied access to full welfare citizenship. Topics include: principles of comparative studies; models of welfare; convergence versus divergence; the dynamics of welfare-state development; welfare regime analysis; crisis of the welfare states; and the impact of welfare states.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 439-3: SW/Law and the Justice System

Social Work, Law and the Justice System examines various areas of the Canadian legal system: constitutional documents and conventions, the court system, the provincial legislative powers, rights of Aboriginal Peoples, the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and provincial legislation (such as Adoption Act; Child, Family and Community Service Act; Child, Youth and Family Advocacy Act, Family Relations Act, etc.). It also examines the practice of Social Work in court settings. Specifically, it provides a basic understanding of the rights and interests of children, rules of evidence, and the role of various interveners. Court writing skills will be introduced and court visits will be arranged.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 440-3: Social Work in Mental Health

This course examines policy and practice issues pertaining to the understanding and delivery of Social Work services to people with a psychiatric disability. Although the content will explore many ideas that are international and national in scope, the primary focus will be on the policies and practices that are relevant to people in northern British Columbia. Students will examine assessment and intervention methods as well as analyze the impact of current trends and changes in the health and social welfare system pertaining to people who require mental health services. The nature and impact of psychiatric disability are viewed from both an individual level as well as a structural level of analysis. The major emphasis is on practice and policy issues relating to people who are sometimes described as “psychiatric survivors”.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 441-3: SW and Substance Abuse

Social Work and Substance Abuse examines alcohol and other drugs in terms of their effects on individuals, families and society. It also looks at different roles of social workers and human service workers in helping people deal with and understand alcohol and drug abuse.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 442-3: SW with Victims of Abuse

Social Work with Victims of Abuse examines physical, emotional and sexual abuse and violence perpetrated on less powerful individuals. The roles played by the helping professions in this context are also examined.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 443-3: Medical Social Work

Focuses on the knowledge, attitudes and skills workers need to practice effectively in health care settings. Case studies will be used to demonstrate different methods of intervention in this context.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 444-3: SW: Critical Issues in Aging

Critical Issues in Aging, Social Work Practice and Research examines the physical, social and psychological needs of the elderly. Adaptation of generic social work skills in effective intervention with and on behalf of the aged is also examined.

It also focuses on the historical character of sexual relations and gender and begin to challenge what is taken for granted in contemporary society specifically as these notions affect social work policy and practice.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 450-3: SW and Family Practice

Social Work and Family Practice through the application of family systems theory, will examine current approaches to working with families in community counselling settings. Completion of a family assessment, as well as a critical examination of power dynamics in families, and their connection with the larger society will be undertaken. Issues of gender, race, age, class, sexual preference, and so on, will be analysed in this context.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 452-3: SW/Crisis Intervention

Crisis Intervention in Social Work examines the historical development of crisis intervention practice and theory. Several models of crisis intervention are presented with an analysis of their application to particular areas and fields of social work practice. Included in the fields of practice are suicide assessment and intervention, child abuse, spousal assault, physical illness and disability, psychiatric emergency and grief resolution. Analysis and discussion will centre around crisis intervention as it applies to social work practice with minority groups in northern communities. In addition to lecture and discussion material, interview and process skills will be practised in this course.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 453-3: Social Work Practice and Spirituality

This course provides a forum for the critical exploration of the impact and influence of religious thought and practices on human service work. The historical roots of this work are based in religious movements, aspects of which still affect today's practice/policy. In an increasingly multicultural environment, students must have a fundamental understanding of religion and spirituality in order to practice effectively.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 454-3: Disability Issues

This course involves students in an examination of perspectives on disability, as well as a critical analysis of current theories, policies, and practice. The course begins with an examination of common assumptions about disability and provides opportunities to challenge and critique interpretations of the nature and meaning of disability.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 455-3: First Nations Governance and Social Policy

Family Values and standards of First Nations form the basis of the study on First Nations policy development and its relationship to self-governance for First Nations' Communities. Topics explored include: self-determination from a First Nations perspective, its impact on Canadian Social Policy, along with the necessity to address Child and Family social needs into self-governance and planning. The course focuses on examples within British Columbia communities. Additionally, the course explores the importance of how social work practitioners need to become skilled advocates aimed at influencing policy and laws affecting First Nations and family systems.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 456-3: Family Caring Systems

This course creates an understanding of family caring systems from an Aboriginal/First Nations perspective. Topics explored include Aboriginal/First Nations worldviews, traditional roles of family members, the role that historical events have played in the development and current social realities of First Nations and the role that social workers can play in family wellness. Contemporary social work practices with Aboriginal/First Nations children and families are also analyzed and critically reflected upon, with a particular emphasis on directions in Aboriginal/First Nations child and family welfare.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 457-3: Individual and Community Wellness

This course creates an understanding of the role that wellness plays in the life of Aboriginal/First Nations individuals and communities. Topics to be explored include the definition of healing and wellness, the role that historical events have played in the development and current socio-economic situation of First Nations and the role that social workers can play in the future development of health and wellness of First Nations individuals and communities. As well, the issue of self-care and self-management for First Nations people and the social workers who may work in high stress situations is explored.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 498-(3-6): Special Topics

Special topic courses may be offered from time to time. These courses are available to permit faculty to offer courses in areas that fall within their particular areas of research and expertise in Social Work practice and policy. With permission of the chair of the School of Social Work, students may repeat the course for credit.

Prerequisites: upper division standing or permission of the Social Work Chair

SOCW 499-3: Directed Readings

Students can undertake a directed reading course in order to fulfill a particular learning need and area of interest. Directed readings are dependent upon the availability of faculty resources.

HHSC 420: Interdisciplinary Child Welfare Practice

This elective course will identify and provide opportunities to practice the skill, knowledge, abilities and beliefs necessary for collaborative, interdisciplinary practice in child welfare. The course will explore the meaning, context and skills of interdisciplinary practice. It will provide opportunities for understanding the rationale for interdisciplinary practice as well as exploring a critical analysis of interdisciplinary practice. Finally, it will provide opportunities to understand the perspectives and interdependence of the differing disciplines as they relate to child welfare.

Prerequisites: upper division undergraduate standing

Student Participation in Decision-Making

Every year, one or two students from the Prince George campus and one student from each region will be elected by their peers to participate in regular BSW committee meetings and School of Social Work meetings. These students act as a liaison between students and faculty, and may report to faculty from time to time about student concerns. Such reports may be presented within the meeting, or given to the BSW and MSW Coordinators beforehand.

The role of student representatives includes:

- Acting as a link between the School of Social Work faculty and the Social Work student body.
- Representing students at faculty meetings by communicating feedback received from them. This feedback will be taken forward to faculty in a constructive, meaningful way.
- Attending program meetings, and BSW or MSW meetings.
- Reporting back to students any important information arising from School of Social Work and BSW meetings and keeping the students abreast of current issues within the program.

- Arranging classroom time to be put aside for reporting back to students and eliciting feedback.
- Assisting third year students or new MSW students in selecting their program representation.
- Soliciting student involvement opportunities in specific School of Social Work subcommittees.
- Student representatives' positions will be one year with the possibility of at least one position being a two year term so as to ensure continuity within the program.

School of Social Work Committee:

- Makes changes to existing pre-requisites, course ordering, scheduling, and so on.
- Considers new courses.
- Formulates policy regarding admissions, and other program concerns.
- Addresses student issues.
- Discussion and endorsement of policy matters brought forward from the BSW Committee and MSW Committee.
- Discussions regarding various program and University matters

BSW Committee:

- Discussion of issues and policy specifically concerned with the undergraduate program.

Northern Social Work Student Association:

- This is a student run organization that deals with social issues and matters of interest to social work students at UNBC.

Social Committee:

- Students may wish to organize a formal social committee within the program.

First Nations Student Network:

- Aboriginal students may wish to organize their own activities through this.

Graduation Committee:

- Returning Prince George students should begin organizing plans for their graduation in the September semester. Remember that all of you will be in full time practica during the January semester and may not be seeing each other with the regularity that you do now. You cannot begin too early with these plans.
- Regional students are to consult with their full-time faculty person for information regarding graduation.

Grading and Assignments Policy

The primary purpose of the grading policy is to provide guidance to both students and faculty regarding expectations for various aspects of assignments: due dates, deferrals, late penalties, and so on. It also provides information regarding the grading scale that social work faculty will use in grading various assignments—papers, videos, oral presentations, group work, and so on. There are valid reasons for having this type of grading policy. Social Workers are engaged in work settings where deadlines are important, and they must be able to produce various reports on time, often in a very short period.

Class Attendance: While the School of Social Work is committed to adult education principles, all students are expected to attend classes on a regular basis. The UNBC Calendar outlines dates by which a student is required to add or drop a course. If you registered in a course, or were on a wait list and decided not to take a course, be sure to inform the Registrar and complete the appropriate paperwork. Students should take special note of the first day of classes in each semester and plan to attend classes.

Grading: The mark for any assignment can be a letter grade or a percentage, but not a grade point. If several different assignment marks and/or grades must be combined for a final grade, letter grades are converted to their equivalent percentage. The overall percentage is then converted to a final letter grade, according to the grading table. Faculty members are expected to record both positive and critical comments on assignments. Students admitted to the School of Social Work must attain a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.33 (C+). The passing grade in Social Work courses is 2.00 (C) with the exception of Field Education courses that are marked Pass or Fail.

Submission of Assignments: Those course assignments that are not required to be handed in during class sessions must be submitted to the appropriate School of Social Work office and date stamped by 4:00 PM on the due date. (This is the time beyond which the program administrative assistant may not be available.) When the due date for an assignment (or the extended deadline for an assignment) falls on a day that the university is not officially open, the actual due date will be the next business day that the university is officially open. Please note that UNBC Security members are not able to accept your assignments.

Extensions on assignments are not permitted, except in a case of illness or a serious extenuating circumstance. In the event of illness or serious extenuating circumstance, the student must inform the instructor before the due date and documentary evidence of the illness or serious extenuating circumstance must be provided to the instructor. In addition, the student must also provide the instructor with a draft of his or her assignment at the time of the illness or serious circumstance that indicates that substantial progress has already been made towards a final product. Assignments that are not submitted on the due date will be penalized.

A student who is unable to meet a deadline due to illness, accident, or family affliction may be eligible for deferred status (documentation needs to be provided to account for the lateness, e.g. Doctor's certificate. In any social work course, all assignments that are part of the requirements of the course, whether or not for credit, must be submitted for successful completion of the class no later than two weeks after the last day of the term during which the assignment was due. The following table shows the grading scale for the University of Northern British Columbia School of Social Work. Your assignments will be graded according to this scale.

Grading Schedule

Letter Grade	Grade Point	Percentage		Evaluation Criteria
A+ A A-	4.33 4.00 3.67	90 – 100% 85 – 89.9% 80 – 84.9%	Excellent	Represents work of exceptional quality. Content, organization and style all at a high level. Student demonstrates excellent comprehension of the subject and makes use of existing knowledge, literature and research. Writer uses sound critical thinking, a high level of personal engagement with the topic, and is able to apply knowledge to practice.
B+ B B-	3.33 3.00 2.67	77 – 79.9% 73 – 76.9% 70 – 72.9%	Good	Represents work of good quality with no major weaknesses. Writing is clear and explicit and topic coverage and comprehension is more than adequate. Good use of existing knowledge on the subject. Shows some degree of critical thinking, personal investment and application to practice.
C+ C	2.33 2.00	67 – 69.9% 63 – 66.9%	Satisfactory	Represents work of fair but not good quality. Shows some comprehension of the subject, but has weaknesses in content and/or organization of the assignment. Minimal levels of critical awareness, personal involvement or application of ideas to practice.
C- D+ D D-	1.67 1.33 1.00 0.67	60 – 62.9% 57 – 59.9% 53 – 56.9% 50 – 59.9%	Marginal	Does not meet the minimum passing grade of 2.0 (C) required to be counted for credit towards completion of a BSW (see 2013-14 academic calendar p. 196). Serious flaws in content and/or style. Poor comprehension of the subject, and/or little involvement in the paper. Poor use of existing knowledge.
F	0.00	0 – 49.9%	Failure

Disabilities: Students with disabilities who foresee possible difficulties with assignment deadlines are encouraged to meet with their instructors at the beginning of each term, or whenever a student considers it necessary, to discuss extensions for assignment submissions, as long as it is at least two weeks in advance of the due date. The School of Social Work acknowledges its duty to accommodate the needs of students with disabilities and to provide confidentiality, privacy, and empowerment based on adult education principles.

Getting Help for Writing Skills: Students needing assistance are expected to seek out appropriate resources to improve their writing. The Academic Success Centre at the Prince George UNBC campus offers various services free of charge to students. Regional students should contact their regional faculty for more information regarding assistance.

APA Style: All assignments in the School of Social Work are expected to be written competently, clearly, in a well organized fashion, and with adequate annotation. Assessment of writing effectiveness is part of the overall evaluation of all written work, whether or not a specific portion of the grade is designated for this purpose.

Examination Policy

Please note that the term ends on the final day of the exam period NOT on the last day of classes. Students are advised to avoid making travel arrangements for a date prior to the date of the final exam as scheduled by the Registrar. The instructor will not hold early examinations for the purpose of accommodating travel requests.

Academic Probation

BSW students who have attempted a minimum of nine credit hours at UNBC with a cumulative grade point average of less than 2.33 may be placed on academic probation. In the School of Social Work, anyone who obtains C- in a course must meet with the advisor. A student with a GPA that falls below C (2.33) will have their status in the program subject to review.

Grade Review Procedures

Students are referred to the general university regulations on appeals in the UNBC Graduate and Undergraduate Calendars. The following regulations apply to students in the School of Social Work:

- Step 1 Any student wishing clarification about a grade, or who is dissatisfied with an assigned grade, should first discuss the matter with the course instructor. If the student wishes the instructor to review the assignment, she or he must make this request within three days from the date that the assignment was returned to the student by the instructor. A student who wishes to have an assignment reviewed by the original marker must make this request in writing, stating reasons why the student is dissatisfied with the original grade and stating the grounds on which the student believes the grade should be reviewed. A copy of the original assignment and grading sheet should be attached to this written request. If asked to do so, the instructor will review the assignment and decide whether or not the original mark should be confirmed or changed.
- Step 2 If this review confirms the assigned grade and the student is still dissatisfied, an appeal can be made in writing to the Social Work Chair within three days from the receipt of the instructor's decision. The appeal shall state clearly the grounds on which the student believes the grade should be raised.
- Step 3 Where a request for a grade review has been assessed by the Social Work Chair to have merit, the Chair may appoint a second instructor to re-read the assignment in question, or may undertake the review. This marker will be provided with a statement on the objectives of the course. The mark may be raised, lowered, or remain the same.

- Step 4 If the matter is not resolved at this point, the student may choose to take the matter to the Senate Committee on Academic Appeals. See details in the UNBC Calendar. The Appeals Form is available from the Registrar's Office
- Step 5 If the assignment is one based upon performance other than a written assignment, the Social Work Chair will develop a set of procedures in accord with this policy, in consultation with the instructor and student. When setting such assignments, faculty and students should make every effort to document the performance. Student participation may or may not be graded; nonetheless attendance is required in courses and practica.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is “the willful act of presenting another person’s work as one’s own without the proper academic acknowledgement and recognition”. When Latin was spoken, a plagiarius was a kidnapper. The meaning has not changed a lot since then. A modern plagiarius, instead of stealing human beings, steals words or ideas, and passes them off as his/her own.

Students should know that it means theft of intellectual property. Students sometimes plagiarize ideas from outside sources without realizing that they are doing so. Students plagiarize if they present another writer's words and ideas as their own. They do not plagiarize if they provide citations for all direct quotations, paraphrases, and borrowed ideas. Examples of plagiarism include:

- Using direct quotations or large sections of paraphrased material without acknowledging the source.
- Handing in a paper written in whole or in part by someone else as one's own.
- Preparing a paper or assignment for submission by another student.
- Copying an assignment, or knowingly allowing one's assignment to be copied by someone else for the purposes of plagiarism.
- Buying or selling of term papers or assignments.

Plagiarism is often described as one of academe’s “cardinal” or “deadly sins.” The offence threatens the scholarly community at its core. By effectively killing off the author of original research and writing, it violates the university’s broader commitment to truth and the highest ethical and professional standards in the pursuit of knowledge. A student who commits such an offence runs the risk of a range of sanctions including a zero grade for the assignment, a failure in the course, or a requirement to withdraw from the University.

Confidentiality

Faculty and students will make every effort to maintain a high level of confidentiality with regard to professional and personal information shared in class, or in private conversations. Possible exceptions may occur:

- When an emergency situation arises.
- When instructors share concerns with the academic advisor or where maintaining such confidentiality represents a breach of the code of ethics. Every effort will be taken to advise the student that such information will be shared.
- With regard to practicum, where the faculty instructor deems that an issue will affect student performance in a practicum setting, this information will be shared with the agency supervisor.
- Where academic difficulties are serious and the faculty member is making efforts to resolve them.

Field Education

Field education or practicum is a required course in both years of the School of Social Work (SOCW 302 and 402). To enter SOCW 302 students must have completed SOCW 300, 301, 310 and 320 with a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.33 (C+). To enter SOCW 402 students must have successfully completed all the required 300 and 400 level courses and have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.33 (C+). Field practicum is marked on a pass/fail basis.

Maintaining Student Status

Students must complete their degree within eight years of their admission date. Students who fail to register for a course in three successive semesters lose their student status and are required to reapply to UNBC and reapply to the School of Social Work for the next available student intake. Reapplication does not guarantee admission.

Academic Advising

Each student admitted to the School of Social Work at UNBC is assigned a Student Advisor in the Registrar's Office. They will advise students regarding course selection, graduation requirements, and other related matters. The advisor for the 2014-2015 academic year is Barbara Curtis. Her telephone number is 250-960-6494. Her email address is Barbara.Curtis@unbc.ca. Students at all campuses are encouraged to consult with the Student Advisor when they have questions related to their academic program.

Professional Suitability Policy

The School of Social Work of the University of Northern British Columbia requires that students in this program conduct themselves according to the British Columbia Association of Social Workers (BCASW) Code of Ethics found at: <http://www.bcasw.org/about-bcasw/casw-code-of-ethics/>

In addition, the School of Social Work at the University of Northern British Columbia requires those students admitted to the program to conduct themselves in a professional manner at all times, while in class or in practicum. In most instances, unprofessional behaviour will be covered under the UNBC Harassment and Discrimination Policy or the Student Conduct Policy or the General University Guidelines (please see current UNBC Calendars).

The School of Social Work is committed to the development of professional graduates and is dedicated to ensuring the highest quality program for its students. The School of Social Work understands and recognizes that Social Work students have responsibility for:

- taking full advantage of the education, training and service opportunities this program offers.
- their conduct in all situations associated with their program of study.
- respecting and treating others without discrimination, harassment, intimidation, and physical or psychological abuse.

Prohibited Conduct: Prohibited conduct includes, but is not limited to:

- any violation of the Student Conduct or Harassment and Discrimination policies or the General University Guidelines, in which case those policies shall be followed.
- demonstrated behaviour with respect to other students, faculty, colleagues, school, or the public which is harmful or destructive.
- conduct, which if participated in by practicing social workers, would result in a serious violation of the Code of Ethics.

Review Mechanism of Professional Suitability: When circumstances arise which do not fall within the scope of other University policies relating to student behaviour, then, concerns about student behaviour will be dealt with under the following procedures:

- Step 1 Where an instructor believes that a student has been involved in prohibited conduct she or he must forward that concern in writing to the Chair of Social Work within 15 working days.
- Step 2 In investigating the complaint the Chair will meet with the instructor, the student, and any other person necessary in order to ascertain the basis of the allegations/counter allegations. Then together with the student's faculty advisor, the Chair will meet with the two parties to see if the issue can be satisfactorily resolved on an informal basis.
- Step 3 If the matter can be resolved informally, the resolution will be final and there shall be no further proceedings.
- Step 4 However, if the matter cannot be resolved informally, the matter will be referred to a tribunal.

- Step 5 In the event that the investigation continues, a tribunal will be established by the Chair of Social Work comprising a faculty representative of the School of Social Work, a College (CASHS) faculty representative, a social work student and a member of the Northern Branch of BCASW to hear the complaint. The College faculty representative will serve as Chair.
- Step 6 The tribunal will judge the complaint according to the criteria established in the policies and procedures of this document and make its recommendation to the Dean of the College of Arts, Social and Health Sciences, who will decide on any disciplinary action to be taken.
- Step 7 The student has the right to appeal the decision of the Dean and would exercise this right through the normal appeals procedures of the University.

A Caution About Use of Social Media

Students should be vigilant and appropriate in their use of electronic communication – email, Facebook, twitter, etc. Remember that while a student at the University of Northern British Columbia you must abide by the UNBC “Student Standards of Conduct” in all forms of communication, (page 34, 2014-2015 undergraduate calendar –Student Standard of Conduct). As a student in the UNBC School of Social Work, you have the additional responsibility to abide by professional standards as set forth by the British Columbia Association of Social Workers (BCASW) Code of Ethics <http://www.bcasw.org/about-bcasw/casw-code-of-ethics/>. While adherence to these standards is mandatory in all your work and involvement as a UNBC Social Work student, you must be particularly vigilant when in practicum placements or other experiential settings. Violation of professional standards - including when using social and electronic media - may result in suspension or dismissal from the School of Social Work or the university.

Harassment, Discrimination and Diversity Initiatives

The University of Northern British Columbia is committed to providing a working and learning environment in which all students, staff and faculty are treated with respect and dignity. The University of Northern British Columbia acknowledges the right of all individuals in the University community to work or learn without discrimination or harassment because of race, colour, ancestry, place of origin, religion, family status, marital status, physical disability, mental disability, sex, age, sexual orientation, political beliefs or criminal or summary conviction offense unrelated to their employment. An approved policy, available at <http://www.unbc.ca/policy/category/diversity> applies to all members of the UNBC community and is administered by the Harassment and Discrimination Advisor. For further information or assistance please contact the Harassment and Discrimination Advisor at 250-960-6618.

UNBC Email

UNBC corresponds with students via their UNBC email address only. Important email messages using the UNBC email address will be sent to current students from various departments of the University as well as from your instructors. All students admitted to UNBC are assigned a UNBC email address. If you haven't already done so, it is important that you activate your UNBC email address. Please visit www.unbc.ca/passwordreset to activate your email.

It is your responsibility to activate and check your email to ensure that you don't miss out on important announcements. If you need assistance with activation please contact the IT Service Desk at support@unbc.ca.

Hope this assists everyone to get connected.
