In the spring of 2010, our research team updated the inventory of service providers, community groups, and government contacts. We wish to thank all the residents, community groups, business members, service providers, policy makers, and municipal staff who took the time to help out and to answer our many questions.

A special thanks to Leslie Groulx who provided us with numerous background documents that supported the development of this profile.

Inventory Guide for the District of Clearwater

About this Report

After being incorporated in December 2007, the District of Clearwater embarked on a series on strategic planning and development initiatives. Canfor's announcement in 2009 to close its Vavenby operations (District of Clearwater 2009) provided a further sense of urgency to complete an economic development strategy that would reflect the local assets, aspirations, and priorities of residents. In the summer of 2010, the District of Clearwater approached the Community Development Institute at the University of Northern British Columbia to complete an economic development strategy.

This inventory guide is an important piece of this community and economic development strategy. An inventory provides important information to identify capacity gaps, as well as to examine the competitive advantages that can support community and economic development. Understanding this information is critical to inform strategic decisions about infrastructure investments and program development in Clearwater. While the original inventory was done in 2011, it was updated in 2012.

This report is divided into three parts. The first part discusses the strengths and gaps of available services and infrastructure to support community and economic development initiatives. The second section identifies plans and documents that can help the community to mobilize resources and take advantage of development opportunities. The final part provides a listing of all local and regional contacts of individuals and organizations that can support community and economic development planning in Clearwater.

Part 1: Services and Infrastructure

As communities embark on processes to diversify their economies, they will need sufficient capacity to support new developments. Such capacity can help communities to mobilize their assets and resources to capitalize on opportunities. Services play two key functions in building capacity and supporting community and economic development. First, services help rural and small town places to cope with restructuring and transition as a result of economic downturns or plant closures. Job losses stemming from industrial restructuring or closure can place increased demands on local services for education and training, business development, counseling, health care, and other support services. Without such services, residents would have to cope with the additional burden of leaving their community to access assistance.

Second, services provide opportunities for building relationships, partnerships, and trust. Together, these can lead to innovative ways for delivering services where they might otherwise not exist. The purpose of this section is to provide the District of Clearwater with a gap analysis of available infrastructure and services which can support the community's strategic economic development and planning processes.

Services provide an important foundation for retaining and attracting residents and businesses. Since the 1980s, however, rural and small town places have been experiencing changes in service provision due to economic and social restructuring trends. Some small places have been experiencing population declines. At the same time, federal and provincial government policies have withdrawn service infrastructure that can provide a foundation for economic renewal and assist residents to cope with the stresses associated with community transition.

Clearwater must consider a number of challenges in preparing to meet the needs associated with economic restructuring. Limited service availability erodes a community's capacity to respond to social and economic change, as well as to attract new residents and businesses.

Educational Services

Educational institutions are playing a changing role in maintaining quality of life in rural and small town places. Schools have provided other amenities through their libraries, theatres, and art galleries in places that would otherwise not have access to such services. They have also played a larger economic development role. Community colleges can provide skilled and professional workers, act as a broker of services, and act as a repository of information. They can also design programs and services that are relevant and respond to the changing labour market conditions of small places.

With an elementary school, high school, and literacy programs, Clearwater is well equipped to cope with the basic educational needs of its population. The North Thompson Community Resource Centre also offers general work-related training, first-aid training, continuing education, small business development programs, and some university transfer courses.

Health Services

Health services play an important role in attracting new labour and retaining residents. During times of economic and social restructuring, closures in hospitals and the centralization of physical and mental health services can be difficult on the elderly and the poor who do not have access to a vehicle or who live in a place with limited transportation services. Fortunately, residents in Clearwater have access to most basic health care services. The services offered at the Dr. Helmcken Memorial Hospital include:

- emergency room services,
- ambulance services,
- palliative care,
- x-ray,
- mental health and addiction services, and
- 6 inpatient beds.

In addition to having a local hospital, there are three family physicians, home support services, public health services, prenatal programs, residential care, a pharmacy, a chiropractor, a dentist, speech therapy, and optometry services in Clearwater. However, there are no surgical services, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, CT scan facilities, or pediatric / obstetrics beds in Clearwater. More specialized health care services are available in Kamloops and Kelowna.

Protection Services

Protection services contribute to community capacity in a number of ways. For example, volunteer fire departments and various crime watch programs provide opportunities for community involvement and interaction, both of which can build trust and leadership. Policing services, victim's services, a volunteer fire department, Search and Rescue, and 911 service are all available in Clearwater.

Legal Services

Legal services are another example of specialized services that are often not found in rural areas. The absence of legal services has important implications as residents must commute to go to court, to access legal services such as preparation of wills or for purchasing real estate, or to have passports or affidavits signed. While legal services can be limited in small communities, Clearwater's residents have access to a lawyer, notary public, and provincial court services within their community.

Financial Services

Businesses play a role in providing a range of activities that enhance the quality of life of a place, as well as the viability and stability of the local economy. Business members also play an important role in community development as they can provide leadership in, and support for, local volunteer groups. Local businesses are also an important source for fundraising and sponsorship of specific local organizations or events.

With its close proximity to Wells Gray Provincial Park and other natural amenities, the local economy is largely driven by the service industry with many businesses listed under retail; accommodation and food; and arts, entertainment, and recreation. Overall, there are a range of financial services in Clearwater, including branches for both the Royal Bank and the Interior Savings Credit Union, ATMs, a real estate office, insurance services, and accounting services. This has important implications for not just retaining residents, but also for retaining and attracting businesses as well. However, there is no industrial park. The closest industrial park is located in Barriere.

Communications

Connectivity is crucial in the new economy. Communication services also allow residents to maintain contact with family and friends. With improved communication infrastructure, rural and small town places can improve local employment opportunities, and support business networks.

The Internet can be used for a variety of communication purposes and functions, such as e-mail communication, posting community or business information on websites aimed at an external audience (such as information about festivals, property for sale, etc.), or providing information for use within the community (such as copies of council minutes and agenda, community event schedules, etc.). The speed of the Internet connection available in a community can affect the kinds of information that can be posted, and transactions that can occur. Having a variety of Internet Service Providers (ISP) to choose from can also help to keep the cost of access to a minimum.

When considering an Internet connection, residents, businesses, and institutions in Clearwater have multiple ISPs to choose from, including Clearwater Cable and Internet, Galaxy Broadband, Telus, Bell, and Rogers. Residents also have access to three public Internet stations at the public library. Public Internet access has been important for Clearwater residents affected by social and economic restructuring. These public terminals can be used to search for alternative employment opportunities, as well as education and retraining programs. The availability of high speed Internet has also enabled on-line courses to be offered through the Community Resource Centre. There are also several local web design businesses.

A local newspaper is an important communication tool in a small community for sharing local news, social events, results of sports and school activities, and advertising for local businesses. Without a local news venue, it is rare that sufficient local news and information is carried in other regional or provincial papers. Clearwater residents and businesses have access to one local newspaper and several regional newspapers. The Clearwater Times is available in print form and online at: http://www.bclocalnews.com/bc\_thompson\_nicola/clearwatertimes.

Elderly and Childcare Services

Childcare services provide an important part of the educational and care services in rural and small town places. Childcare also provides men and women with children an opportunity to participate in the labour force. In addition to 3 daycares, there are also parenting, infant development, and early childhood education programs offered by the Yellowhead Community Society.

Other services of importance are seniors' services including nursing homes and retirement homes. These services are particularly important given the aging of the Canadian population. There are currently two seniors' housing facilities in Clearwater, including Swanson Valley Supportive Living and Evergreen Acres.

Government Services

Town halls and post offices are the most frequently available government services in rural and small town places. Post offices not only provide a service and identity, but also opportunities for routine social interaction to build relationships. Other government services play an important role in community capacity by providing a local source of expertise and knowledge upon which the community can draw.

The provincial government maintains a number of local offices in Clearwater, including the Ministry of Attorney General, the Ministry of Transportation, the Ministry of Environment, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, and the Ministry of Forests, Mines, and Lands. However, the closest Service BC offices are located in Kamloops and Valemount.

Of particular concern for households experiencing change is the absence of a Service Canada or Employment Insurance office. While some outreach support and workshops are provided by Service Canada, households experiencing stress will have to commute to Kamloops for services to help them cope. However, other government services are available locally including a town hall and a post office.

Community Services

Community services can provide an important foundation from which to build relationships, and can be important sources to draw upon during times of economic and social stress. Overall, Clearwater has a range of community services including a food bank, thrift store, second hand store, safe house, mental health services, personal and employment counseling services, life skill programs, Community Living services, a senior's drop-in centre, and four churches. While youth tend to be forgotten in aging communities, Clearwater is very fortunate to have a youth coordinator. In addition to the North Thompson Communities Foundation, there are also a number of service clubs to support community development including the Elks, Royal Canadian Legion, and the Rotary.

Transportation

Transportation infrastructure can have important implications not only for attracting economic activity to a place, but also for enhancing the quality of life of vulnerable groups in rural and small town places. Transportation services, especially freight services, can play an important role in attracting industry by providing additional options to export products. However, without adequate, affordable transportation options, mobility can be difficult for women, seniors, or those with disabilities to move within the community and to access services in adjacent centres. Being mobile enables citizens to have access to services, to be involved in the community, to develop local friendship ties and support networks, and to experience social activities.

Transportation services have become important to attract economic activity to Clearwater and to enable residents to commute to other centres for needed services. Freight train infrastructure, through CN Rail, is in place to transport resources out of the region. There is also a helicopter base to support industrial activities, forest fire fighting, search and rescue, and tourism activities. In addition to a local transit service that connects Clearwater and Vavenby, residents may use the local transit service to commute to Kamloops on Thursdays. Residents also have access to a taxi service, gas stations, and automobile repair shops to support their local mobility. Other regional transportation options include the Greyhound bus service, VIA Rail, and the Interior Health Connections bus. The closest airport is located in Kamloops.

Recreation

Clearwater is able to offer access to many recreational programs and natural amenities. With its close proximity to Wells Gray Provincial Park, residents and tourists have access to numerous lakes, waterfalls, rivers, and other features that support hiking, canoeing, kayaking, horseback riding, and related activities. There are also numerous other lakes, notably Dutch Lake, located close to the community to support fishing, boating, and swimming. During the winter, there are opportunities for downhill and cross-country skiing, as well as snowmobiling. The North Thompson Sportsplex provides a venue for hockey, skating, and curling. There are also community playing fields, a tennis court, two golf courses, a skateboard park, and a fitness gym in the community. The senior's centre provides a venue for indoor recreational activities such as carpet bowling and social activities.

Art and cultural activities are supported through the public library; and cooking, gardening, theatre, gymnastics, dance, and arts classes are offered through the Community Resource Centre. While there is no community centre, there are several local halls that can host community events. A performing arts centre is also located nearby in Birch Island. This bodes well for the retention and attraction of residents, as well as the overall quality-of-life. There are, however, some recreational facilities that are not available locally such as an indoor swimming pool, movie cinema, museum, bowling lanes, and an outdoor seniors' park.

Shopping

Shopping services contribute to the success of the local economy and are considered to be an important gauge of economic health of rural and small town places. Shopping is also an important recreational activity and provides opportunities for social interaction. Low levels of shopping services can lead to out-of-town shopping and perhaps even out-migration. Clearwater offers all the basic shopping services, including a grocery store, a bakery, a farmer's market, liquor stores, two hardware and building supplies stores, artisan shops, recreation equipment stores, restaurants, and a clothing store. More specialized shopping services are accessible in Kamloops and Kelowna.

Economic Development Organizations

Economic development organizations can play an important role in promoting the community to attract not only additional businesses, but also to attract a wider population base. As these organizations are comprised of local business individuals, they are important sources to draw upon during economic and social change. In Clearwater, businesses can access support through the local Chamber of Commerce, Clearwater Employment Services, the Tourism Wells Gray Association, and the Rotary Club. Other supports offered through Community Futures, the Business Development Bank of Canada, and the Aboriginal Business Service Network Society are accessible in Kamloops.

Housing

Housing has been used as an incentive to attract residents to rural and small town places. However, a lack of housing options as a population changes, or ages, can be a problem and can lead to out-migration. Housing options can improve the quality of life of residents, especially the more vulnerable citizens, including senior citizens or those with disabilities. While independent and assisted living options are available for seniors, there are no social or co-op housing options for families or single individuals in Clearwater. Rental units are also limited within the community.

Challenges and Opportunities for Clearwater

Although Clearwater faces challenges with on-going restructuring, it has a foundation of services that contributes to its capacity to cope with change. The town has a good foundation of educational services that can provide new training and educational opportunities. Clearwater can also capitalize on its natural assets to attract new economic activity, and promote an efficient and wiser use of a broader range of resources by multiple stakeholders.

A challenge for Clearwater is limited shopping and specialized services that can result in commuting and economic leakage.

Fortunately, Clearwater has been able to capitalize on its assets. It is continuing to promote its natural and recreational amenities. In particular, it has been promoting itself as the Gateway to Wells Gray Provincial Park and has been exploring new opportunities through mining and developing a community forest. It is also capitalizing on new adventure and event tourism opportunities. These assets will go a long way, not just in attracting tourists and economic activity, but also for retaining residents.

Part 2: Government / Governance Documentation for Clearwater

The purpose of this section is to list the plans and documents that may exist in Clearwater. In turn, these plans and documents can serve as valuable tools in a community's efforts to mobilize resources / assets and take advantage of opportunities during economic transition processes.

Part 3: A Network Tool for Clearwater

The purpose of this final section is to identify key contacts for local and regional networks for Clearwater. This will help to determine linkages that currently exist between local and other local and non-local individuals and organizations. This information can be used as a foundation to determine what, if any, potential network contacts a municipality may need for community and economic development planning. To facilitate different forms of communication with these groups and organizations, any available or applicable contact information is listed, including key contact personnel, phone numbers, fax numbers, physical street address, mailing address, e-mail, and website.
