

An affront to reconciliation: Indigenous Peoples and Canada's Track 2 MAiD

January 31, 2025

In an era committed to reconciliation and renewing its relationship with Indigenous Peoples, Canada has legalized euthanasia and physician-assisted suicide with Medical Assistance in Dying (MAiD). Through Bill C-7 or Track 2 MAiD, legislative eligibility to participate in MAiD evolved to make medicalized death available to those with chronic health conditions or disabilities, and MAiD for mental illness is under review. Further to this, the federal government is currently engaged in a process of consultation regarding the inclusion of advanced requests for MAiD in Canada. Given systemic issues of ableism, colonialism, racism, and sexism in Canada, and the disproportionate eligibility for First Nations, Métis, and Inuit Peoples to receive Track 2 MAiD, Indigenous perspectives on this law should be amplified. Drawing on Dr. Robinson's lived experience and scholarship, this talk will present tensions between Track 2 MAiD and Indigenous Peoples by describing how this legislation is a contemporary extension of settler ableism, settler colonialism, and state-driven eugenicist tendencies. How Bill C-7 is an affront to reconciliation must be shared.

When: Friday, January 31 from 12 PM to 1:30 PM
Where: In person only (Room 7-152)

Dr. Rheanna Robinson

Member, Manitoba Métis Federation
Associate Professor, Department of First Nations Studies
University of Northern British Columbia

Presented by:

Global Friday

UNBC UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN BRITISH COLUMBIA
Faculty of Indigenous Studies, Social Sciences and Humanities